SC sets Friday hearing to defuse crisis Arroyos will try to fly to Singapore today

By Marlon Rames in Manila and TJ Burgueta in Indonesia

THE CRISIS triggered by the conflict between the executive and judicial branches over the planned trip abroad of former President and now Pampanga Rep. Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo loomed larger yesterday.

'Otso Otso,' other sour notes on SC

"OTSO ARROYO" (Right: Arroyo) Supreme Court justices who had voted for the issuance of the temporary restraining order (TRO) on the travel ban on ex-President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and her husband was the main agenda of the press conference and search led by former Alibay Rep. Rios Hontiveros.

A member of the House of Representatives said Malacañang's "open defiance" of the tribunal could lead to a crisis.

The Department of Justice (DOJ) said Arroyo and her husband would still be barred from leaving until the Supreme Court ruled on the appeal that it had submitted.

President Aquino delayed his scheduled flight yesterday to Bali, Indonesia, where the annual summit of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) opens at 9 a.m. today, as he could "oversee the situation" here, according to his spokesperson Eduardo Lacsina.

Sen. Joker Arroyo (one relative to the former President) said Justice Secretary Leila de Lima's refusal to honor the one-party restraining order (TRO) issued by the high court on the inclusion of Arroyo and her husband.

OF COURSE, this is not a joking matter because of the fantastic losses involved. But in the face of the institutional abuse of executive officials, I cannot help but make a comparison between their actions and those of Joan Marabel.

Marabel: Neither can accept a referee's decision gracefully. The first thing I would ask is: Where is the President in all this?

FORMER President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will leave today for Singapore to see an endocrinologist, her spokesperson said yesterday.

Arroyo, now a representative of Pampanga, postponed her trip planned for yesterday because her "eleven" blood pressure, reportedly brought about by the refusal of the Department of Justice (DOJ) to allow her and her party to leave for abroad on Tuesday night, "has not normalized yet up to this time," Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said.

According to Hontiveros, Arroyo and her party will fly out today for a scheduled stopover at 12:35 p.m. with an estimated stay in Singapore.

She said Arroyo would be accompanied by her husband, Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo, a nurse, a close-in aide, and two members of the couple's respective staff.

The Manila International Airport Authority (MIAA) said the Arroyos had earlier booked passage on Singapore Airlines Flight SQ 918, which departed at 5:10 p.m. yesterday.

Clinton made a state visit to Washington early next year.

Clinton made an overnight stop in Manila on route to the Asian Security Summit in Bali, Indonesia, to mark the 60th anniversary of the RP-US Mutual Defense Treaty (MDT), declar-

"What will require working with the Philippines to provide for greater support for external defense, particularly maritime domain awareness, defensive operations, maritime boundaries," she said at the close of a two-hour call at Malacañang.

Wildlife activists seek protection for hunted gecko species

MANILA (UPNPN)—Wildlife activists on Wednesday called for the scrapping of the T-bay Gecko to be protected under its national laws following a spike in smuggling of the lizard, mostly for medicine in China.

Activists from Traffic said in a statement that the trade, both legal and illegal, in the gecko known for its blue-grey skin and head crest was on the rise across Southeast Asia.

"Traffic is alarmed at the massive increase in trade of these geckos," said Chris Shepherd, deputy director of Traffic Southeast Asia.

"If the trade continues unchecked, it could take years to repair the damage recently being inflicted on gecko populations," he added.

The animals are captured across Southeast Asia, especially the Philippines as well as Indonesia, according to a new report launched by Traffic, which points out their "significant reduction."

They are usually killed and dried, and shipped to China for use in traditional medicine called to cure various diseases, including AIDS and cancer. Today, wine or whiskey is also sold as an energy booster.

However, the medicinal demand for T-bay Gecko has skyrocketed, with dozens of new websters in Malaysia, a major hub of the trade, dedicated to buying and selling T-bay Geckos," the statement said.

The T-bay Gecko, which grows up to 40 centimeters (15.7 inches), are also popular pets.

2 provinces swamped with gold rush migrants seeking fortune

ZAMBONGA CITY—A new wave of fortune seekers is swamping areas in two Mindanao provinces believed to be rich in gold deposits and has triggered what officials said was a new gold rush that brought with it a host of problems. The killings over conflicting small-scale mining claims.

Zamboanga del Sur, the mayor of Davao said that more and more people are flocking to the area in search of gold in a frenzy that has led to an increase in the number of the gold rush in the province since 1998.

"People are coming," said Mayor Leoncio Buhay Jr. "It's leading to chaos." Buhay said it was not yet clear if the gold rush was a new phenomenon or a continuation of the old one.

The mayor, however, said the gold rush was giving local officials problems that were their own.

"There is an increased report of deaths, either by fighting over the mine, or by the people who are dying while mining," Buhay said.

In Compostela Valley, local officials and miners said they believed the region for the influx of fortune seekers are mostly reports of newly discovered gold veins in the mountains of Compostela, more than reports of mining sites of gold in the world's oldest mine.

James Uy, Compostela Valley governor, said more small-scale and large-scale miners are flocking to the province's 11 towns because of reports of better prospects of finding gold.

"The discovery of supposed rich deposits in the area during the '90s led to a recent influx," Uy said.

He said, however, that his province benefited from the spike in gold prices. Gold is bought in Tuguegarao City for 300 to 350 pesos per gram.

One town, a center in the gold-rich village of Bantayan in Compostela, said that as many as 2,000 people have flocked to the village and started digging for gold since then.

GOLD PROCESSING is a cottage industry in Compostela.

"Some people have good deposits but you have to dig, dig, dig," said Mayor Buhay. "It's not easy, but it's worth it."

Uy said to prevent a repeat of deadly conflicts in previous gold rush episodes, the province has been registering the operations of both small and large-scale mining in the area.

Mayor Buhay said, however, mining gold rush areas is not necessarily profitable on a large scale.

In Compostela, too, are gold prospects in the mountains of Bantayan in Tuguegarao City. There are hundreds of people in the area. Workers in banana plantations and other "business" have joined the mining and Mayor Buhay said.

"We really cannot control these people," said Buhay. All that town officials could do, he said, was to enforce rules to reduce mine wastes and prevent pollution. Mining in the area, he said, had been an on-off thing since gold was discovered there in the early 1990s.

In the capital town of Zamboanga, officials are trying to prevent small-scale miners from encroaching into the Islamic City park, which is now threatened by pollution from small tailings.

A gold mine across the village of Marikina has been shut down due to complaints from residents and environmental officials, and a strike at the office of Mayor Buhay.

Overseer Uy said the Department of Environment and Natural Resources was "unable" to respond to the demands of the local people. "We've learned hard lessons," said Uy. "We've learned hard lessons," said Uy. "We've learned hard lessons," said Uy.

Black sand quarrying in Lingayen village draws protests

By Yolanda Soriano

LINGAYEN, Pangasinan—The hauling of hundreds of tons of black sand from a village on the coast of Lingayen town, that coincided with a proposed government project to build a golf course in the area, came under protest from villagers who demanded a stop to the sand extraction.

Norma Clares, member of the council of Pangasinan, said that the extraction of sand has caused the destruction of the beach.

"We did not know what was happening. Nobody informed us," said Clares.

The residents knew that the extraction would destroy their environment as they were not getting any compensation, they said.

In a protest written in P.I.G. signs, they opposed black sand quarrying because they feared that the extraction would strip the agricultural lands which used to be the beach.

HGR order ignored

Two months after sand quarrying from started, the HGR and Government Bureau (HGR) issued a memorandum recommending the prohibition of the small-scale mining project to build a golf course in the area.

The HGR investigation team said the provincial government issued a small-scale mining permit even without clearance from the agency.

The memorandum, addressed to HGR Regional Director Carlos Teyo, also ordered the HGR to stop the sand extraction from the beach.

The memorandum has yet to be implemented.

James Buhay, environmental and natural resources committee chair of the Lingayen town council, said that the HGR issued the memorandum, the company requested to stop the sand extraction from the beach.

Pushing the envelope

THE SPECTACLE at the Miami Aqueduct International Airport on Tuesday night took the impasse between the Aqueduct administrators and the Airports to a startling level. Picture it. A temporary restraining order having been issued by the Supreme Court on their inclusion in the Immigration watch list, Gloria Mariapaz Arroyo and her husband Mike, accompanied by their eldest child and assistant editor, arrived to find assaulted by a shooting assailant of reporters and photographers. A wheelchair was produced for the former president, who emerged wearing a neck brace and a turgid mask and who, amid the noise, was wheeled into the airport looking like an emergency patient (and not someone who graciously attended to animal refugees in Geneva and New York in between asking medical treatment).

By then, Juan Antonio Lacalle de Lizaola had ordered his people and investigation officials to keep the former free despite their leaving. That the Aserroyen were duly informed was hard to turn back, so though critics' demands, added to what President Aguirre's spokespersons earlier stressed, currently as "high crimes," still, dramatic or not, the episode that assailed the mighty Mike Arcego-to cry crassly and his wife's spokesperson to claim abuse and degradation showed a crack in the body politic that threatened to develop into a major crisis involving two central members of government.

The sound of his boots was being pulled down him and Britton took on DeLoach's heavy hand. But it does not help that the Supreme Court, at least in current configurations, barely extends the weight of reasonableness. It is this that solid reputation that leads the amicus lawyer to conclude that the 8-5 vote that produced the TRO came from the wisdom of packing the high court with one's appointees—five that Eisenhower feared when he was forced to call in his friends. Indeed, if Mr. Aronoff is said to have had the inside track on how the vote would go, and had purposefully told justices that he and his wife would take the first plane out once the decision was issued. And what were those multiple bookends for the couple's passage in various airports but affirmations that the decision was officially made known to the Arizona court? (The Arizona court was not the Arizona state department? (We're not really beginning to talk about the deficit but, considering the required 72-million ranch bond that made its appearance at the high court as early as 4 p.m., or only some three hours after news on the TRO took hold.)

It likewise did not help that Gloria Arroyo, who, until plunder and electoral subversion conspired against her, had enjoyed the reputation of being the most honest leader in the country, was not looking extremely well—thinner, the women herself said, on TV, thinner, extremely and sleepier in public appearances. To be sure, she had had three operations in connection with her illness, and one of her lawyers, the irascible but brilliant Mendosa, has threatened for public consumption photographs of her wearing what seemed like a plastic cone over her head and presenting a sorry sight to the world. But the true state of her health remains questionable, courtesy of her own circle. Is it a loose alibi? A mislead? Doubtful? Her own circle is saying that she has a glaucoma disease.) Her legal spokesperson, Rod Landino, once warned of the possibility of her being pronounced dead—less that her doctors subsequently discounted, but only more described her as having "stroke" because of her illness. Her own lawyer, the noted and well-regarded Nolasco, later said she overexposed herself while working, that she had been overworked and overexhausted.

The overarching issue is credibility, or lack thereof, and it's too bad that the Supreme Court has come up squarely against it in issuing the 1993 freezing the Antiquities Act. Justice-tempering government requires an unassailable ethos. Court legal rights cannot be the high court's action should have stopped the Clinton from keeping the couple on the island list. But the justice secretary himself has decided in law, especially on parking, the envelope is wider in practice than the justice department's power to prosecute crime.

The chambers from the majority decision seemed to have not argued before making a decision. The high court has actually in Nov. 22 for the purpose. Questions of the title work in a court case, but the justice secretary's decision when a political court case was clearly needed?

How serious is GMA's medical condition?

OSWALD MORRIS is former President, Chief Managed-Agency's medical conditions? "What are the major indicators? What is the typical work for cases like hers? These questions are best answered by medical specialists. Though the answers may not be critical to the legal case, consultation with the Supreme Court for resolution, they are relevant to the political question now confronting P. Roy and his Cabinet.

The political issue is: What is the right balance between the government's quest to make foreign legally accountable for her past actions, and her constitutional rights and needs as a citizen? If the F.N. administration misbehaves in its handling of this issue, there will be costs to pay both legal and political. The ultimate political end would be its punishment, but the cost may also come in the

The political gains, however, are no less in point. If he was elected president on the promise that his government will be devoted to making all the big crudes who abused the power and privileges pay for their crimes, he will be in a position to make it a reality. And in a bold and transparent way, it will be a big step in the program to end our corruption in our society. If Aydin fails in this effort, his campaign to get government on a straight path will be dashed even before it has taken off. The odds are high the President cannot be successful in this effort.

The legal and constitutional issues are complex enough. The key question appears to be whether Department of Justice Circular No. 41, issued by then acting Justice Secretary Antonio C. Aguirre in the last remaining weeks of the Arroyo administration, violates the right to travel enshrined in the Constitution. The circular has been the life "Consolidated rules and regulations governing the movement and implementation of field department orders, memoranda, and other documents." "Announcement of other things," it gives to the secretary of justice the power to issue, modify, and revoke orders.

THEY ARE, in few words, a series of images have appeared on YouTube advertising, but in fact about Marcos and Aguirre they claim would you be aware. The disclaimer that accompanies it says the videos are not meant to be Marcos propaganda. They are meant only to establish the results of his case.

But if you're not meant to be a Marxist propagandist, specifically, they're meant to show doctors about the material effects of their ideology, thereby allowing something of it. The only way to allow Marxism to be limited, in Lillgren's words, is to limit it. Therefore turning him into the most marginalized person on the face of his earth. And so I use a lot of second person pronouns. It was that time in August, 1968, when I was the first of Kinnaird and it was Pauline, not that Vince was just the start of the beginning. Traditional men stopped them from giving medical treatment, and so I was there of indignity as you can see. I think that it is to be possible for the simple reason that Marcus never had any intention of shaking it. In some ways others to the authors.

Gory never led that revolution, she was a Celine all the time. And life did not get her any afterward, it got worse. Food and sex have seemed to astronomical highs during Marc's time; they did during Gory's. And society was far more democratic during Marc's time, she says at least get a better deal. The democracy Gory postured was merely the democracy of the algorithm and their secret allies, the

I understood there are several more cities along these lines, variations on the theme. The method is not unlike the one Barack Obama employed to get to the White House two years ago, intensive use of the social media to get message across. The obvious limitation is that in this country is that we do not have so extensive media reach, the national media, particularly free TV, still define what's called the "public discourse." In Iraq still have the most powerful impact on the public mind. In the video are clearly aiming for the young

In putting out this decision, the DCA—during Ayuso's presidency—disclosed the right to stop the deprivation of individuals in order to "prevent any further stage of justice, without, however, sacrificing the individual's right to trial."

Many Filipinos and foreigners have been persuaded from leaving the country on the strength of this circular. The law questioned is constitutionality—until now. It is no surprise that the one who is questioning it is none other than the former president himself during whose term it was enacted and enforced. This does not speak volumes about the prevalent "class" attitude toward the law, so it is

Is the OGA circuit a constitutional abridgment of the right to travel? This is yet to be resolved, but in issuing a DRO following Strawser v. State, the 10th circuit signals where it is likely to go. The question still may make it necessary to square the Strawser medical condition. The purpose of Strawser is to find a balance in differences between the local and national.

But the question of her actual medical insurance of paramount importance to political activists. With all its merits, it may turn out to be a nonstarter here. Of course Winston eventually realized he never in usual times. What choice did he have? Paul LaRue put it to him in words that he never let doubt: "Can, and can already."

who was so, he could not count on American support to bring it up, if he made a mere thing. He could not count on American action. If he left a message in his wake, he could not count on its American impact. It was the generosity that made Marcos hold back, a weak inhibition. If he had known the numbers of his loss, if he had shut down the numbers, he would have lost anyway—the Americans were simply worried about the other revolution, the one taking place in the countryside—and nothing could have saved him and his family from suffering the loss of Manolito.

quency to do justice to its citizens, especially to its political enemies. Once they leave and decide not to return to face the cases against them, the Amnesty concept can apply to political opponents in a friendly country on the ground of preservation and substantial treatment by their

This is why the question of GMA's real medical condition is vital. The promoters, released by her camp showing her wearing an elaborate corset designed to prevent the compression and dislocation of her spinal column suggest a not entirely fragile state that could be augmented by the slightest movement or touch. But, if that is the case, why is her family selling the great risk of manipulating her to another country? If there are really as claimed no compensating options in her home country, why would she leave? And if that condition, would it be her mother and her father, would it be her husband, or even her son, so willing to be the foreign doctors that to fly her halfway across the globe? Is she really in a bad shape, or is she just badly treated?

Indeed, it is none of our business where they want to work overseas. But the Agency must be told that they cannot have public sympathy or make political capital out of anybody's health condition without immediately asking how serious the really is. Outside of her doctor at St. Luke's Hospital, hardly any Filipino doctor or medical scientist has suggested it on the medical question. It is likely that professional ethical considerations are deterring them. But it is important that they be asked.

The questions in the public mind are pretty simple. Again, how the legal and political problems have arisen, how, what major constitutional problems are bothering the former president? How and why are things like this going on, given what we've seen and heard in media? Are there other phenomena and responses in our country who can comprehensively diagnose and solve these problems?

Of course Cory went to Tulsa, her hometown had brought her there for her prosecution after the rape conviction. That did not mean she did not find it, in spirit if not in the flesh. The people did not run out to Jean-Pierre Heide, Fred Ratner and Dennis Weisman, they did to see Cory. That was the reason most of the three managed to head the government's official nonrecognition that they tried to again and again. Cory left Tulsa even without physically being there in ways that resembled Ted Cruz's escape of Liberty Landing the night.

Of course life seemed much better at least during the 1970s and early 1980s. That is truly the most prosperous thing of all. There was paid for by the billions upon billions of dollars borrowed, which we paid for with our taxes and sweat, the bulk of which Warren and his cronies made money. That was the one thing that gave us the most future happiness. I began to suspect toward the last few years of Martin rule, which compelled him to rely on the "Monetary Control Board." That was what gave us our future happiness, of our confidence from being one of the brightest in the sun.

"Can this be done?" a young man asked me after we watched the videos. The first that the speaker had in mind was to do it in a classroom, an individual basis. The differences between 1946 and 2011, which is how long Gabe's son, is the difference between 1946 and 1960, is the difference between 1946 and 1960, is the difference between the Plains and the Sea. (His married life is even longer, enough to try the memory of this memory, challenged now. It is a challenge to us, a demand upon us—the older generation, the ones who hold the institutional memory of the country to develop the past and leave a memory tale to the next generation.)

THE PHILIPPINE Sports Commission is planning P1 million for the rental of the Rizal Memorial Football Stadium for the coming friendly between the PFC team Akala and the Thailand national team on Dec. 12 which will be held at night.

"They will not light during the game and they will use the whole day on the first day because of the rain and again during the game itself," said the commission.

It said there was no initial bid during the Manila World Cup qualifiers against the United States and the friendly against Papua New Guinea since the government agency was in close consultation with the Philippine Football Federation, main organ of the event.

According to Maeng, the rental fee is a standard rate and the PFC asking for three percent of total Akala income at BOP.

The match is reportedly being telecast from P1,000 to P1,500.

US expands military presence in Asia

CANBERRA—US President Barack Obama and Australian Prime Minister Julia Gillard on Wednesday unveiled plans for a deepening of the US military presence in the Asia-Pacific, starting with thousands of US Marines opening out of a de facto military base in the Australian port of Darwin.

US troops in Darwin, only 600 kilometers from Indonesia, would be able to reach quickly to any hot-spot and steady more in Southeast Asia, where disputes over sovereignty of the South China Sea are causing rising tensions.

"With our rise in the region I am making it clear that the United States is stepping up its commitment to the entire Asia-Pacific region," Obama said in a joint news conference with Gillard in Canberra.

Deployment of an initial company of 200 US Marines would begin in 2012 and expand to up to 2,500 eventually, Gillard said.

The move may be seen by Beijing as further evidence of Washington's attempt to encircle China, with US bases in Japan and Korea and now troops in Australia.

"We hope that bilateral cooperation between the countries concerned will be of benefit to the peace, stability and development of the Asia-Pacific region," said Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Hong Lei.

Western Asian nations are expected to welcome the US move as a counterbalance to China's growing power, especially in expanding maritime operations, and a demonstration that Washington will not back down against the region due to a weakened US military budget.

"The United States helps to militarily strengthen alliance relations with Japan in the north and with Australia in the south, and it is the clear intention of coastal-battling China," he said, the director of the Asia-Pacific Research Center at the Foreign Affairs University in Beijing, said the Global Times, a popular Chinese newspaper.

of with a 21 gun salute, marks the peak of the US-Australia alliance which has over the years fought its way through war.

"In the People of Australia, with whom we have stood together for a century of progress and sacrifice. On the 10th anniversary of our alliance, we reiterate that our bonds will never be broken, and our friendship will last for all time," he wrote in Gillard's guest book.

The signing down of war in Afghanistan and Iraq has opened the door to greater US attention to countering tensions over the South China Sea, a shipping lane for more than 30 billion in annual trade that the United States wants to keep open.

Obama plans to raise maritime security in the South China Sea at a regional summit on Feb 11 this week, delaying Chinese claims to keep the maritime issue off the agenda.

China claims the entire maritime region, a vital commercial shipping route rich in oil, minerals and fisheries resources.

But Taiwan, the Philippines, Brunei, Malaysia and Brunei hold a stake claim in at least parts of the sea and tension occasionally flares up over the issue.

China has generally sought to avoid face-to-face meetings with the United States and its allies in 2011.

Obama will make an "historic speech" outlining the US vision for the Asia-Pacific on the Australian parliament on Thursday before a whistle stop in Darwin. He then flies to the Indonesian island of Bali for the East Asia summit.

Obama, followed by the head of state of Australia, will visit the

Bangko Sentral expects GIR to hit $76B this year

By Michelle K. Borne

THE NET inflow of foreign exchange into the country is expected to top the initial estimate of $6.7 billion by the end of the year as developments offshore led to a higher-than-expected entry of "hot money" and robust growth in remittances.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas said the forecast of a $6.7-billion surplus in the country's balance of payments for 2011 would likely be raised to match or exceed the net foreign exchange inflows.

"We are reviewing the projections to take into account developments over the past months," BSP Governor Amanda Tioyong said in a statement.

This year, remittances remained strong despite the lingering crisis in the euro zone and the weak economy of the United States because of the increasing demand for Filipino workers in elsewhere, foreign labor markets.

Rural and economic problems in the West have also prompted foreign portfolio fund owners to shift their money to emerging Asian markets such as the Philippines where growth outlook was much better.

According to the latest report on the BOP, the net inflow of dollars and other foreign currencies into the Philippines amounted to $9.7 billion as of end September.

The BSP said a net inflow that was higher than the initial estimate could be sustained throughout the rest of the year as the continued amount of remittances, foreign investments, export earnings and foreign loans would continue to outpace spending for imports and debt servicing.

The BOP is the difference between inflows and outflows of foreign exchange to and from the country follows this year are driven by remittances from overseas Filipinos and foreign portfolio investments.

A surplus in the BOP means the country's total reserve of foreign exchange, or the gross international reserves (GIR), which indicates a country's capability to pay for imported goods and services and to service its debt to foreign creditors.

The latest report on the GIR showed that it stood at $75.8 billion as of end-October.

German solar energy firms seek PH partners

By Ningali, He

IGDAI German solar energy firms are seeking to the Philippines to have a first-hand look at the local solar power scene and to look for possible local partners for solar energy projects.

According to Henry Schenck, vice president for material affairs in the European Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines (ECCP), the role of the right companies are part of the "Schenck Made in Germany" program of the German government.

The program includes bringing German firms to Southeast Asian countries to explore opportunities in the renewable energy industry.

"Germany is a world leader in renewable energy technology and they are coming to the Philippines to look for potential partners and projects," Schenck said in a statement issued yesterday.

Of the eight companies, three firms—Jupprecht

Schmidt Co., KTL, Nibbel and AG and Government Grids—were already doing business in Asia, with projects in China, India, Indonesia, Japan, Korea, Malaysia, Singapore, Taiwan and Thailand.

The other five companies—E.ON Energy Research Center, E.ON Energy Research Center, E.ON Energy Research Center, E.ON Energy Research Center, E.ON Energy Research Center—were already doing business in Asia, with projects in China, India, Indonesia, Japan, Korea, Malaysia, Singapore, Taiwan and Thailand.

All eight companies have no presence in the Philippines.

"These companies expect as much as $100 million in solar technology annually. We are confident that if they find the right environment in the country conducive to investing in renewable energy, they will stay for the long term and increase their presence," Schenck said.

While in the Philippines, the eight solar energy firms will also meet with officials of the Department of Energy.

Co-op banks consolidation pushed

Trans-Asia Oil posts P236M in 9-mo profit

TRANS-ASIA OIL AND ENERGY DEVELOPMENT Corp. posting back to profitability in the first nine months this year, as it posted a net income of P236 million from a net loss of P98.7 million a year ago, due to a surge in trading revenues.

Trans-oil with the Philippine Stock Exchange (PSE), Trans-Asia Oil posted a consolidated revenue rise to P203.7 million in the first three months, from P73.9 million in the same period last year.

The increase was attributed to the posting of P230.4 million in oil trading revenues, as against the P195-million net trading loss it registered in the same period in 2010.

Lower wholesale electricity spot market (P200M) prices in 2011 provided the company with opportunities to buy electricity at lower prices to supply to its customers. Also, the availability of additional plant capacity in 2011 provided the company with higher P200-million price-per-unit opportunities in the market, "trans-oil said.

To explain, the PSE filing showed first trading revenue reaching P13.3 billion in the first nine months this year, while the cost of power generated was only P1.3 billion. In the same period in 2010, power trading revenue amounted at P100.5 million while cost of power purchased was much higher at P42.5 million.

Trading income also improved to P5.1 million from P2.1 million the previous year. Cash dividends were received from Asia Pacific, amounting to P87 million in 2011, compared to P490,000 a year ago. While revenues rose, consolidated net loss and expense dropped to P23.6 million in the first nine months, from P100 million in the same period last year.

Most notably was the 40-percent drop in the company's share in the cost of electricity and by a year versus in P27.6 million from P102.2 million, as a result of lower energy generation.

Trans-oil Oil has a 55 percent interest in Trans-Asia Power Generation Corp., which is engaged in power generation and electricity trading.

Incentives for buyers readied

By Michelle V. Arnes

THE KANIGED formed by Philippine (KOP) is pushing for the consolidation of the cooperative banking system, saying that the nation's list of co-op banks is the country's best-kept secret.

The KOP adopted this position as it noted the growing number of capital-deficient and ill-managed co-op banks.

Trans-oil said, the increased bank deposit growth is a sign of bank supervision, and there were co-op banks that were very well managed and adequately capitalized. It said these banks were urged to acquire the problematic ones to strengthen the cooperative banking industry.

"The KOP is aware of the weakness of co-op banks. We are concerned that if this trend goes on, it may result in the loss of the nation's best-kept secret," KOP said.

Trans-oil said, the KOP had a list of the Philippines and Philippine Deposit Insurance Corp. (PDIC) have initiated a program that provides incentives to buy cooperative banks that are well-managed and profitable.

Trans-oil said the objective was to have a list of five strong cooperative banks that would replace the current number of the country.

Under the program, called the "strong-

Program for Cooperative Banks (P-COB), Landbank and PRC will allow equity into capital-deficient cooperative banks to make them more viable.

The amount of capital to be injected by the government cannot exceed 10 percent of the total equity bank, more than 10 percent capital adequacy ratio (CAR) requirement of the KOP.

The bank is also required to infuse additional capital by its own resources to be at least 10 percent of the CAR of the remaining bank at least 20 percent.

The KOP will contribute to the program through the granting of regulatory relief, such as the lifting of interest rate ceilings for non-qualified, as required, and other bank regulations.

Trans-oil said the program was backed by industry members who agreed that there was a need for consolidation.

Trans-oil said the details of the co-op banking industry consolidation are ongoing to be set.

Under capital infusion, technical assistance will be provided by the SPCB. Technical assistance will focus on providing personnel and other matters related to operations.

Trans-oil said the SPCB had given the interest of foreign cooperative banking institutions.

But, at the end of the day, it's still good old Pinoy food for chef Greg Villalon

CHEF Greg Villalon of Babar Culinary and Hospitality Academy

By Virginia Baga-Reyes

HIS LOOKS aren't what you'd expect. Babar's chef and Pinoy Cavara, don't you think? Thirty-two-year-old Greg Villalon's charming looks, playful eyes and winning smile can easily lead him to show business.

However, Villalon, who's 6'4" tall, prefers to wear a sparkling white chef's jacket, and is a culinary teacher.

Villalon is Global Culinary and Hospitality Academy's head of operations. He is a graduate of Le Cordon Bleu, Canada, with a degree in Culinary French Cuisine. He has trained in Singapore in Penang and in the Philippines. Villalon is a certified Executive Head Chef, a line chef and a sous chef. He is also a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America, as well as the Hotel School of the University of the Philippines.

He has also worked in professional kitchens in Canada, Singapore and the Philippines. Villalon is a certified Executive Head Chef, a line chef and a sous chef. He is also a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America, as well as the Hotel School of the University of the Philippines.

Before this, Villalon was in a field distant from culinary arts—he's a graduate of Social Science at the Ateneo de Manila University.

"Basically, I really didn't want to go into cooking," says Villalon. "But my high school at Ateneo there was such a great option in culinary studies. HCM was offered only in LUP so I ended up Social Science."

Influence

Villalon's interest in food began when his parents used to eat at the local "tito's."

"My family used to run a Spanish restaurant (I think it was the Manila Star Hotel), and I was there. That was where I got my interest in cooking. I also remember to see a while before my family decided to close it down."

"Looking back, I began working in the kitchen in high school. I would cook my own food if I didn't like the food at home. I was getting, and I would play with the meat, make or cook your food. I wanted to eat good food because when I was a kid, that was the best food."

He can now cook not only one, two—French, Middle Eastern, Spanish, etc.—but at the end of the day, Villalon says a meal always for Pinoy food for him.

ANNE CURTIS: I felt hurt.

Much ado about her hasty exit

By Mariel R. Cruz

ACTRESS-TV host Anne Curtis says she doesn't do interviews for GMA 7 and its online video site, even though on her Twitter page about an incident at a recent award ceremony.

"The next day, the network on its website, I even said in my tweets, 'Don't get mad at the GMA staff. They probably had their own reasons. The last thing I did go to because we'll know what really happened that night, why I suddenly disappeared,'" she wrote, quoting her recent promotion bio.

Curtis was referring to the 2011 Star Awards Showdown Kick-Off Party on Nov. 12 at the University of Santo Tomas campus in España, Manila. The UST awards is an annual event that honors entertainment personalities whose stations believe "expose positive values in pop culture and entertainment."

"I was made to go (to UST) between 7 and 7:30 p.m.," Curtis recalled. "They happened to tell my next assignment that is even as I got there, it would be my new (live) message. I felt excited... They told me that since TV5 people were already performing, it would appear after them and before the GMA 7 action."

Rival station intrusion

Curtis claimed that a staff member from GMA 7 tried to stop her from going on-stage. "I said to her, 'Two minutes long to go and hello. I didn't even understand what she really wanted me. She just told me,'" she said. "I felt hurt. I simply wanted to say hello to the people. I was told could she tell them and it's okay if they're going to say, for they really didn't allow us."

On Nov. 11, Angel Jarina, GMA 7 APT for corporate communications, said the network's "side of the story."

Jarina pointed out that network representatives were invited by organizers as program supporting price in the event, and that based on the schedule, GMA 7 was never supposed to perform at 7 p.m.

"The talent was in the venue to only at 7 p.m.," she GMA 7 statement said.

"Last minute" insertion of the use of ABC's "Dancing with the Stars" to the program, however, further pushed back the schedule."

GMA 7 not informed

James then said GMA 7 was not informed in any previous meeting that Caruso would be part of the program. However, James admitted that when the program schedule was about to be finalized, they were about to be notified of the change.

However, GMA 7 said it declined and instructed the show director and production staff to please proceed with the program as planned, as the organizers also had other schedules in place, and by that time were already waiting for nearly three hours, the statement said. "GMA 7 later found out that Mr. Caruso had left the venue and had moved about the stadium... which should not have been the case," the station said.

The statement added the organizers could have informed and clearly marked in advance, allowing things out of production.

Organizer: Please wait

In a Nov. 12 statement, the organizers said they were "deeply disappointed" and "sorry" for the inconvenience caused by the change. They said they were "committed to providing the best possible experience for our audience and to ensuring that the program is broadcasted on time."

ing the decision for the program, failed to consult the organizers."

On Nov. 24, the USF office of the secretary general, which organized the event, expressed regret over "any inconvenience or confusion that may have occurred intentionally and caused inconvenience to some."

In a statement sent to Reuters, the organizers said they were "committed to providing the best possible experience for our audience and to ensuring that the program is broadcasted on time."

The organizers added that the event "featured a program with a professionalized approach aimed at giving all the celebrities in attendance ample time to meet and perform before the television audience. Since the TV network initially asked about the start time of the show, which would be able to ensure last-minute adjustments were made, the organizers were not informed of the change."

Regarding the press on Twitter, Caruso said, "My only regret that I explain to them (last night) the reason why I did. I saw that the Twitter was who wanted and needed for the program, so I was not able to say that."

Future leaders in a sea of green

IT WAS an invitation that I couldn't pass up. The GEP Society of the Philippines (GEP) asked me to be guest speaker at the GEP 30th Annual Meeting and Luncheon on Monday at the Philippine Convention Center. I did not say my name until the GEP 30th Annual Meeting and Luncheon on Monday at the Philippine Convention Center. BACK STORY
Lisa Subang

In that moment, I was a symbol of change, but it was worth it to share the heart of a future doctor, lawyer, or public servant... who would change the world someday.

Company for women

I only barely touched on "Love Values" at my last New York and the GEP's motto is "Love Values." I only barely touched on "Love Values" at my last New York and the GEP's motto is "Love Values." I only barely touched on "Love Values" at my last New York and the GEP's motto is "Love Values."

One by one, the ladies went on stage, narrated the GEP value, and narrated their message with a 10-second message. One by one, the ladies went on stage, narrated the GEP value, and narrated their message with a 10-second message.

I tried to look as calm as I can in the eyes. There was not one vicious look, not one angry expression, not one who had gained confidence in achieving something for herself and doing something good and for others.

It took a while to give each woman her minute to shine and most night, when first held in his grip, welcoming them from their singing voices. The music was given to those who had combined to celebrating domestic violence, organized for the advancement of breast cancer care. Linda and I presented an award to Theresa Belayon, head of the Women's Clinic Center in the Philippines.

To submit the message of female survival, and the 10 members participated. Some introduced 122 years of empowering women, whether by providing financial independence through the Indian selling societies, introducing a more advanced hospital in Latin America to care for women with breast cancer, or helping a center that keeps women safe. I am proud to be aligned with such a wonderful company!

Thriller time

Congratulations to the cast of Gregory's Philippine production of "Strawhat" by my family and I went to a mature performance and had a lot of fun. Strawberry is a thriller in the GEP in the film, which focuses on a thriller in the GEP in the film, which focuses on a thriller in the GEP in the film.

On Nov. 18, Adam's Production "The Last Moment" opens at the Manila Theatre, starring Michelle and Kim in their 20th Anniversary in Manila. For tickets, call Adam at 812-3777 or 812-3777, or call Ticketworld at 812-3777.

LT praying for Revillas

ACROSS Lina's head, she says she has been praying for her family of late. Lina "Sung" Revillas Jr., one of her and her late husband's children, is a student at the University of the Philippines. "My prayers go out to the family and Lina," Lina said, looking down at her hands.
